An appropriate number of chariots to transport approximately 30 heroes, including offspring and hounds Schooner and Scrappy, squeezed into the car-park. Male hashers were treated the very agreeable sight of Centre of Attraction's legs being allowed out to play in shorts for a change, which provided stimulation to the elderly and knackered to keep going. Concerned harriettes required an explanation of Bidet's "PMT" hash T-shirt. It soon became apparent that hare for the day Fruit 'n' Nut seemed not to trust his trail markings, as he indicated the correct way forward at many of the checks. Alternatively, he may just have been anxious to get back to the pub.

The trail meandered around an area that has become very familiar and has been much enjoyed by members of the Deepcut Hash, and a final re-group by the Officers' Mess gave those in the know an opportunity to take the proffered shortcut and head for home. The penultimate check was a one-blobber leading into almost virgin rain forest, and after two blobs, the trail completely disappeared. Back in the car park, early returnees were rewarded with the un-solicited information from Velcro that he was desperate for a poo. Technology failed at this point, so your scribe has no recollection of who was ritually humiliated in the Circle.

However, at the pub, the landlady had laid on a splendid repast (on the house) to make reparation for the fact that the usual range of meals were not available, and we enjoyed the conservatory that was reserved for us. The excellent arrangements in the pub more than outweighed any perceived shortcomings of the trail, and were much enjoyed by all. Very many thanks, Fruit 'n' Nut.

On-On Love 'n' stuff,

Bidet
